US Army Ex-Service Personnel Australian Placement Programme

Fort Hood, the largest American Army post in the world (50,000 soldiers) is located in Central Texas. Each month, hundreds of the soldiers leave the Army from Fort Hood and seek employment in the civilian world. These soldiers are well trained, disciplined, and possess a myriad of skills useful in civilian jobs. They are familiar in operating efficiently in hostile environments with a minimum of home comforts. The US Army will begin to demobilise and release 65,000 soldiers in the coming year.

Australia has a large need for employees in the mining, civil construction and oil and gas industries. Australia is a wonderful attraction for Americans and many would be willing to temporarily relocate.

PARTNERSHIP:

The partnership assembled is a 'Coalition' of specialist organisations from Australia and the United States. Our capability is to recruit, select, immigrate, orientate, train, contract and employ US Military ex-serving soldiers for skills shortage positions within the resources sector of Australia.
